France, Britain Planto Start Channel Tunnel Next Year

PARIS, Aug. 16 (Reuters).—France and Britain have given the go-shead for final studies envisaging a start next year on the construction of z. Channel tunnel linking the two countries, it was announced today.

A communique said Pench Transport Minister Robert Galley and his British counterpart John Peyton had authorised a new phase of study and works which will lay the ground technically and financially for definite construction of the rail turinel. The two will sign an agreement Sept. 30 on financial and technical matters which will clear the way for the beginning of construction work.

Plans call for a 35-mile tunnel beneath the Channel bed. High-speed trains would make the crossing in half an hour, and would link London and Paris in some two hours 40 minutes less than half the time now required. Estimated cost of the tunnel is £356 million, according to figures given to the British Parliament by Mr. Peyton last month. This compares with an estimate of £200 million

The ministerial go ahead announced today was the most crucial step in the long-discussed project since preliminary studies began eight years ago. The communique said the principles for financing the tunnel would be "sketched out" in a convention next month.

Backing the project size the British Channel Tunnel Company and its French counterpart, Société Française du Tunnel Sons is Manche. Banking interests are strongly represented

Moroccan Rebel Pilots Attack King's Plane, Palace With Jets

RABAT, Morocco, Aug. 16.— Rebel Maroccan Air Porce fighter pilots today tried unsuccessfully to assassinate King Hassan II by attacking his airliner as he returned here from France, strating the main air terminal after he landed, and then shooting up the royal palace.

Rebel and loyal F-5 fighters engaged in doglights over the capital Loyal troops took over key installations and there was no sign on the ground of any support for the rebels. The rest of the country, including the second major city, Casablanca, was reported calm with normal activity continuing.

Three hours after the airport attack, an official communiqué said that the king, who escaped en army coup only 13 months ago, "has been able to return to palace" and that "at this time, the situation is entirely in hand." It said no one aboard the plane was hurt. Several persons were reported in a wood nearby. One of the fighters peeled off and strafed cars standing in front of the air terminal and others in the parking lot, setting many on fire.

Soon after the airport attack, jet lighters pumped salvces of rockets and mechine-gun fire into the royal palace. Columns of smoke and debris rose above the building. Four jet fighters made at least five low-level sweeps over the palace area, machine guns blazing.

There was near-nanic in the city as shops and offices hastily closed and people milled through the streets seeking refuge from the attacks. The streets were quickly deserted.

Loyalist army troops were reported tonight to have entered the air force base at Kenitra, about 40 miles from Rabat, from where some of the rebel aircraft were believed to have taken off. Adjoining the base is a U.S. armed forces communication unit, which maintains a low profile and whose existence was at one time denied.

said today that he had sent Pierre Salinger to Paris to see if North Vietnam would release U.S. prisoners before the end of the war but that Hanoi would not budge.

He said Mr. Salinger, who once served as President John F. Kennedy's press secretary and has a home in Paris, told Hanoi's negotiators that Sen McGovern wants them to end the war as quickly as possible, even if it means doing so before the November

Sen McGovern's announcement came in a three-paragraph printed statement distributed to newsmen accompanying him on a Midwest campaign swing. The statement came about two hours after Sen, McGovern denied sending Mr. Salinger to Paris with any specific mission.

"Pierre Salinger had no instructions whatsoever from me," Sen, McGovern told newsmen as he stepped from a speaker's rostrum said he had not seen Mr. Salinger in several weeks and had not sent any messages to the North Viet-

McGovern had asked him to make contact with the North Vietnamese and "determine whether or not there had been any change in their positions, particularly with reference to the release of POWs, and to discover whether or not some or all of the POWs could be released in advance of meeting the conditions of their last clearly declared public position." who think that Mr. Kissinger's primary mission might be to reassure Mr. Thieu.

Other analysts have speculated that Mr. Kissinger might be here to try to persuade Mr. Thieu to soften his stance and agree to some compromise formula that Washington and Hanoi may have tentatively worked out in the private talks in Paris. But a widely held view among South Vietnamese newsmen and analysts is that the visit is nothing but American "razzledazzle" to leave the impression that a peace settlement is imminent, when in fact peace is nowhere in sight. These Vietnamese think the timing of the visit might be related to the Republican National Convention, which opens next Monday in

Shelling Continues

The continuing intensity of raids reflects apprehension about reports that North Vietnam has pouring more troops into the Quang Tri fighting which has been characterized in the last few weeks by heavy-artillery duels. Yesterday, long-range Communist 130 mm. guns reportedly fired 190 shells at government troops within a half mile of Quang Tri town, which is still largely in North Vietnamese hands.

The Saigon command continues to claim very heavy enemy casualties in the fighting. It said that yesterday c Soviet-built T-54 medium tank was captured about 10 miles south of Quang Tri.

A Saigon communiqué also reported an important capture in the Mekong River Delta southwest of Saigon. Government operations in Dinh Tuong Province near the town of Cai Lav reported killing 18 enemy troops and capturing 14 SA-7 Strella heat-seeking missiles and six AT-3 wire-guided missiles.

These Soviet-made missiles are among the most advanced and effective in the Communist arsenal. (Continued from Page 1) the dockers' delegates accepted gives longshoremen job security rights enjoyed by no other group of British workers. It comes. however, after 20.000 men were forced out of the industry by the introduction of containers, which lessened the need for skilled cargo stowing and opened the opportunity for employers to move out of port areas to escape high union wages and benefit programs.

Guaranteed Pay The agreement guarantees that every man who is now registered as a dock worker will be assigned to an employer and given full pay whether there is work for him or not. If an employer goes out of business, his workers will be apportioned among the remaining employers in the port.

These provisions will end previous arrangements under which men for whom there was no work got only three days' pay a week. In addition, severance pay of up to $10,000 a man will be given men who voluntarily leave the industry. Most British workers can get a maximum of only $3,000 if they are permanently laid off. The agreement also provides that container cargo work done outside the ports will be done by dock laborers. It was skepticism over the em-will be to take the profit out of moving jobs away from port areas, one of the principal grievances of the men. The militant shop stewards have been demanding, in addition, that private wherves and small ports that are not covered by union agreements be brought under them. On this point, the settlement promises only further study of the problem. There was no immediate comment from government leaders. one spokesman said, "Obviously, we are relieved." Prime Minister Edward Heath took a calculated risk in the way the strike was handled. His government adopted state of emergency powers on a standby basis, but never used them because it was feared it might antagonize the men and abort what looked like a potential settlement. At the same time, it was recognized that a country that must export to live cannot go on indefinitely with its foreign commerce at a standstill.

As it turned out, the strike was relatively painless for most Britons. However, it forced the dumping of most of the Guernsey tomato crop. And the full impact on Britain's exports will not be known for several months.

Fears for Citizenship

Many Asians who opted for Ugandan citizenship at the time of independence in 1962 now contend that official documents have been destroyed and that they, too, face expulsion. Speeches Gen. Amin and other Ugandan leaders during the past week would appear to support these fears, although Gen. Amin has denied any records were destroved.

Mr. Rippon and other officials repeatedly sidestepped questions about contingency plans the government may be making to absorb large inflow of immigrants should Gen. Amin stick to his deadline. "Of course, the interested government departments are in touch with one another over the situation," one official said privately, but he refused to confirm or deny published reports that the Home Office had refused to meet with private voluntary agencies to plan for the expected influx.

How successful Britain will be in getting other Commonweath countries to accept some of the Asians even those born in the countries in question-remains to be seen. Mr. Rippon said today he had talked informally with the Indian high commissioner [ambassador] in London, and that "there is room for a great deal of discussion" about India's potential role, either as a temporary or permanent home for some of the refugees.

Mr. Rippon said Gen, Aminhad assured him that the Asians, many of whom are merchants, would be paid "fair" prices for their businesses, although serious doubts have been expressed about the ability of Africans to raise enough capital to pay adequately for Asian-owned concerns. Gen. Amin has also threatened to "reduce drastically" the $7,000 each Ugandan emigrant is now allowed to take out of the country, a move obviously aimed at protecting the country's already low sterling balance.

It was presented to the Rules Committee yesterday with a flourish of publicity by Sen. John H Tower, of Teras, and Rep-Jack Kemp, of New York, who called it "the Miami compro-mise." Liberal leaders and organizations immediately attacked it as perpetualing the present unbalanced power structure of the party.

Backed by Leaders From the beginning, the Tower-Kemp proposal had the clear blessing of the party's national command. Harry Flamming, for-mer White House political side now with the Committee to Re-Elect the President, said it had been cleared by the committee, and Sen. Tower's statement was circulated under the publicity-release letterhead of the Republican National Committee

But some Republican leaders were quick to object. Charles T. Lanigan, the New York State chairman, accused Rep. Kemp, a former professional football quar terback, of trying a "hidden-ball play." Privately, Mr. Ianigan said the plan would be "suicide" for the New York party.

Under the Tower-Kemp plan, New York would go from 88 to 102 delegates and California from 96 to 111, but only if they vote Republican in the 1972 presiden-tial election. Under the liberal alternative, designed to correct past inequities, New York would get 168 votes and California 160.

Welfare Issue In testimony before the Republican Platform Committee here today, Elliot L. Richardson. secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, said Sen. Mo-Govern's welfare proposals are "misguided, misleading and mis-taken" and chided the Democratic-controlled Congress for failure to act on President Nixon's welfare reform and revenue-

The opponents of the Jackson resolution have argued that it represents a formula for estab-

the atmosphere of good faith necessary for negotiating a future treaty on offensive weapons. In raising his charge, Sen. Jackson, according to aides, was seeking to demonstrate that the Soviet Union had acted in "bad faith" in negotiating the interim agree-any future treaty.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (NYT) -Sen. Henry M. Jackson sald yesterday that the Soviet Union had "lied" to President Nixon about the number of Soviet missile-launching submarines under construction or deployed,

"They said they had 48 submarines," Sen, Jackson said. "We know now from intelligence sources they didn't have 48. They only had 42."

He suggested that the reason the Soviet Union had "lied" was to give the impression it had "more momentum" than it actually had in building up a missile-launching submarine fleet, thus obtaining a higher ceiling under the interim agreement on offensive weapons.

Under the agreement, which in essence imposes a five-year freez: on the number of landbased and submarine-launched ballistic missiles, the Soviet Union is permitted to have up to 62 submarines with 950 missiles. The United States is permitted to have 44 submarines with up to 710 missiles.

A Compromise Plan The agreed level of Soviet submarine-launched missiles was essentially a compromise reached after the two sides differed over how many Soviet missile-launching submarines were deployed or under construction. The United States estimated that the Soviet Union had 41 or 42 submarines, while the Soviet Union said it had 48 deployed or under con-

Administration officials suggested that Sen Jackson was only reviving the differences in num-bers that were the source of dispute and intense negotiations at the Moscow summit meeting in May. But the political effect of the charge was to introduce still another complication into the already-tangled Senate consideration of the interim agreement, negotiated at the Moscow meeting along with a treaty on anti-ballistic missiles.

Army Sets Up School to Ease Racial Ties

HEIDELBERG, Aug. 16 (AP) .-The U.S. Armed Forces in Europe (USAREUR) will establish a race relations school to train 64 twoman instructor teams by Dec. 15 the Army said today.

The announcement followed several outbreaks of violence over which had racial overtones. Such incidents had become rare since Gen. Michael S. Davison took command of USAREUR about a year ago and undertook a campaign to overcome racial discrimination on and off post.

A USAREUR statement said the school, patterned after the Defense Race Relations Institute at Patrick Air Force Base, in Florida, will be located at Oberammergau, in West Germany's Bavarian Alps

Two-Man Teams

"Each class in the USAREUR school will be conducted for three weeks and will consist of 16 teams The teams will be composed of an officer and a non-commissioned officer, one Caucasian and the other from a minority group.

the statement said. The first such class will begin Sept. 11 and volunteer students must have an outstanding record and leadership qualities and be aware of the current social issues it added.

Ten German policemen and 13 blacks, 11 of them American soldiers, were injured in racial rioting outside a Stuttgart bar last Saturday night.

Three weeks earlier, racial fights inside a Ludwigsburg casern left 24 soldiers injured after rumors spread that "the blacks were taking control of the post."

Kep. Aspin Sees Illegal Medicare Claims in Millions

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP). -Rep. Les Aspin, D., Wis., says the federal government may have paid $380 million in illegal Medicare claims, including charges for television sets and private nurses Rep. Aspin yesterday cited a recent Government Accounting Office survey of nearly 14 hos pitals in five states which he said showed "nearly $500,000 had been illegally charged to Medicare out of a total $20 million paid in Medicare claims."

"Federal funds have been used to pay for private-duty nurses, sets, and telephone service for Medicare patients—all illegal under federal law," he said.

"These overpayments are the fault of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and its contractors such as Blue Cross-not the hospitals them-"If HEW and Blue Cross administer the whole Medicare program as indicated by the sample GAO report, then the federal government has been gypped out of approximately $350 million." The reason for the overcharges.

he added, is "pervasive mismanarement, administrative procedures and incomplete audits by HEW and private insurance companies such as Blue Cross,"

Fumbled Opportunity

Lodge and the State Department are being disingenuous, to put it mildiy, in denying "any" knowledge of the 1969 chance for peace in Vietnam that Democratic vice-presidential nominee Sargent Shriver and former Ambassadors Harriman and Vance claim President Nixon "blew." Interpretations of the events of that period may differ, but there can be little dispute on the facts or the Nixon administration's detailed knowledge of them

The new administration's secret National Security Council Study Memorandum on Vietnam of Pebruary, 1969 (NSSM-1) which leaked to the press last spring and has now been published in the Congressional Record, is conclusive on these points. During his first week in office, President Nixon asked eight government agencies for their interpretation of North Vietnam's withdrawal of large numbers of its troops from South Vietnam—the move the Johnson administration negotiators in Paris and Defense Secretary Clifford, among others, had interpreted as a "signal" of Hanoi's desire for de-escalation of the war and a negotiated settlement.

Secretary Rogers and the State Department were among those replying that they saw a political purpose related to the Paris negotiations in North Vietnam's troop withdrawals. In response to another NSSM-1 question, they indicated a belief that Hanol had come to Paris to seek a negotiated setlement-on terms favorable to itself, of course.

Ambassador Harriman briefed Presidentelect Nixon at the Hotel Pierre in New York in December, 1968, and saw him again at the White House on his return from Paris after the change of administrations in January, 1969. Ambassador Vance, who stayed on as Paris negotiator for another month, reported to President Nixon on his return. Both negotiators gave their estimate of the situation repeatedly to Secretary Rogers and other high Nixon administration officials. Notes on these conversations must exist in State Department and White House

There is no valid security reason why some of this data should not now be made public, especially after the detailed reports Henry Kissinger has given publicly about his secret 1971 negotiations with North Vietnamuro member Le Duc Tho. The Harriman-Vance view is that the tenor and the context of their Paris negotiations made

Secretary Rogers, former Ambassador it clear that Hanoi's troop pullbacks were intended to initiate a reduction in the violence of the war, mutual withdrawal of American and North Vietnamese forces and substantive negotiations for a political settlement. The country has a right to the facts on which to base an independent judgment,

> Mr. Shriver's personal role, which the administration understandably has made the center of its counterattack, was essentially peripheral to the negotiations. As President Johnson's ambassador to France, who continued for 14 months under President Nixon, he handled some liaison with French and Soviet diplomats. But, as he has now confirmed, his job did not charge him with reporting to Washington on talks and there is no documentary evidence that he resigned the ambassadorship out of disagreement with Nixon policy on the peace issue.

> The important issue, however, is not Mr. Shriver's role but rather whether the Nixon administration embarked from the start on a policy that brought stalemate in Paris and the continuation of the war for another four years.

> Beginning in the summer of 1968, while Lyndon Johnson was still President, and resuming in early October, the North Vietnamese removed 22 of their 25 regiments from the two northernmost provinces of South Vietnam. That signaled an intention. at the very least, of abiding by the understanding that large-scale violation of the Demilitarized Zone between North and South Vietnam at the 17th parallel would be suspended once American bombing had haited.

> The other key factor, as seen by Ambassadors Harriman and Vance, is that Hanoi agreed after arduous negotiations to seat the Saigon government at the negotiating table in return for the admission of the Viet Cong. Unfortunately, that breakthrough was largely negated first by procedural footdragging by President Thieu and then by his refusal to consider either legalization of the Communist party in South Vietnam or a coalition government there conditions that made a compromise settlement impossible.

The Harriman-Vance view is that the new administration should have set a negotiated peace as its first goal, but instead emphasized the survival of President Thieu and his Saigon government. The same factor that made a compromise settlement impossible in 1972,

China's First Veto?

Mrs. Indira Gandhi celebrated the 25th anniversary of India's independence with a renewed piedge to spur social and economic development for 585 million Indians. Her ability to make good on this promise will depend in large measure on her success in fulfilling another anniversary commitment --- "to establish lasting peace between India, Bangladesh and Pakistan."

Mrs. Gandhi and Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto of Pakistan made some progress toward establishing better relations at their summit meeting in Simla. But the prospects for a more comprehensive peace settlement on the Indian subcontinent have been marred recently by developments in Pakistan and at the United Nations.

In Islamabad, Mr. Bhutto told the National Assembly that Pakistan must accept the fact that Bangladesh, formerly East Pakistan, was now an independent state. But the prime minister stopped short of asking the legislators to extend recognition, a step that Prime Minister Mujibur Rahman of Bangladesh has insisted must be a precondition to peace negotiations. Pakistan's hard line on recognition has been echoed at the UN by China, which has threatened to use its first veto in the Security Council to block a Bengali application for membership in the world organization.

By withholding recognition, Mr. Bhutto apparently hopes to induce India to speed the release of nearly 100,000 war prisoners and to force Bangladesh to reconsider its plans to bring some of the prisoners to trial for war crimes. The effect is likely to be just the opposite—to defer indefinitely essential negotiations with Mujib on these kev issues.

China's surprisingly harsh stand in the Security Council cynically serves to strengthen the hard-liners in Islamabad. A China veto would be an affront to the majority of UN members who have already recognized Bangladesh and favor admission. It would also be a vote against reconciliation on the Indian subcontinent,

British 'Racial Burdens'

The glib way in which British politicians accept racial burdens, which their fellow countrymen will have to bear, is unendurable.

Mr. Enoch Powell discloses that as long ago as 1963 cabinet ministers were aware that the Asians in East Africa could present a huge immigration problem. But they decided to say and do nothing about it.

This unbelievable negligence has landed ns with a further 55,000 immigrants on top of the 1,850,000 already here.

In any well-run business concern such behavior would earn instant dismissal. Without a reference.

PARIS.—The separation of the working mass from Communism and Bolshevism is one of the few hopeful signs of the present general disposition of labor. There was a time, some months ago, when it seemed really possible that the apostles of robbery and bloody despotism sent forth from Moscow would successfully gain the ear and the belief of the majority of workingmen throughout the world. But the excesses of their own regime and the extravagances of their propaganda, together with the insuf-ferable arrogance of their futile logic, produced the natural result. Bolshevism has been falling into greater and greater discredit daily.

WASHINGTON. — Henry Kis-singer's trips to Paris are good news and good politics, since they suggest that there is some movement toward peace, but the fact is that even Klssinger does not expect any real change in the Paris talks until late in the election campaign.

It is assumed by top officials here that Hanoi and the National Liberation Front, despite their serious losses on the battlefield since May, are determined to mount one more offensive before November.

Their supplies from the North have been reduced by the American mining of Halphong harbor and the relentless pounding of U.S. air power, but they have not been stopped, and there is no evidence that the Hanoi negotiators are responding to Kissinger's argument that Nixon's peace terms are more generous now than they are likely to be if he wins the election.

Nevertheless, the administration intends to keep the private Paris talks going throughout the campaign, for the more active Kissinger is on the peace front, the more awkward it is for Sen. Mc-Govern to argue that Nixon is concerned mainly with waging

Dual Purpose

Kissinger's mission to Salgon has a dual purpose. It enables him to inform Gen. Thieu of the tone and substance of the Paris talks and relieves him of the charge that the administration talks to Hanoi but not to Saigon. Also, while Nixon has said he would not force the retirement of Gen. Thieu, he does not want to give Thieu a veto over Washington's peace terms or allow Thieu to think that American air power will be at his disposal for as long as he wishes to remain in office.

The administration would obviously like to see a compromise settlement and a cease-fire in Vietnam before the election in November, but the President is said to be confident that he can win anyway even if Hanoi offers before the voting to release all prisoners of war under Mc-Govern's more generous peace

What the President has not been able to see, however, is how he will be able to withdraw if both Saigon and Hanol stick to their present policies, and the Communists go back to guerrilla warfare, which could go on in-

His dilemma is that the Saigon regime cannot be relied on to defend itself without American air power, and yet is not likely to make any more concessions for peace as long as it thinks the American fighters and bombers will remain.

Peking Cited

The administration has been trying to convince Hanoi, not only in Paris, but with some help from the Soviet Union, that it is trying to work out a lasting accommodation with Moscow, Peking and the other Communist capitals, and that North Vietnam can avoid the destruction of its industries and benefit by the reconstruction of its country if it makes peace.

Officials here say Kissinger has been instructed to inform the negotiators on the other side that Nixon's terms are flexible, and he is said to be urging them to propose modifications to the Nixon peace plan. But unless there has been a change in the last session at Paris, Hanoi has not budged from demands that of its country by a President who doesn't have to worry any longer about the political consequences of the war.

The hope here is that this prospect will look even more un-pleasant to Hanoi than Nixon's terms of peace near the end of the election campaign, and that then Kissinger's negotiations will finally make progress. Meanwhile, the administration establishing more normal Chiis content to carry on the Kissinger talks and let Hanoi choose between bombing and compromise saying, Hanoi will finally choose argument made no impression on peace, or Thieu, if he cannot count indefinitely on American So the stalemate continues and air support, will adjust to the is likely to do so until it is clear realities, but logic has never been to Hanoi that its next offensive a surplus commodity in Vietnam. and it is likely to get even has failed, and that it faces the scarcer between now and Noand the protracted bombardment

Sen. McGover Strategy Dilem:

By Rowland Evans and Robert

DROVIDENCE, R.L. As Sen, ers feel McGovern George McGovern opened his general election campaign last week with a two-day swing through New England, he confronted a conflict between old politics and new populism that poses critical choices for him in

McGovern, iscing unprecedented non-support from regular Democrats, felt a need to conciliate the party's old politicians. But playing old politics, his advisers nave warned, makes it harder to ignite again last spring's populistic spark. Consequently, they urged on McGovern an anti-government. anti-Washington, anti-politics

He ignored the advice. Rather. McGovern split his New England campaigning between wading into crowds for handshaking and meeting behind closed doors with Democratic old pros. The result was amorphous with a slight emphasis on old politics, not at what McGovern's advisers wanted.

The size of the immense and still widening gap between Mc-Govern and President Nixon, Mc-Govern polister Pat Cadell believes, stems partly from Mc-Govern's image as just another politician developed these last three disastrous months. According to Cadell, voters are so antagonistic to politics as usual that McGovern's public embrace of Democratic politicians during and after the national convention has

Abortion View

William Buckley, in his article on abortion (IHT, Aug. 8), is obviously trying to make his point on the basis of the chicken or the egg, and in favoring the egg he comes up with a thoroughly indigestible scramble.

Concerned as he is about the rights of the fetus, he blithely overlooks the rights of the pregnant woman who-in her full maturity and human-ness-is certainly more "ensouled" than the fertilized egg she's carrying. Mr. Buckley and Prof. Noonan are also far from the point when they speak of cuthanasia and slavery. "The right to die" is not at all a "modernist" idea; it has been accepted and respected until quite recently, when modern medicine declared that a living death is preferable to a dead one. Being brought into the world unwanted and unloved is surely as bad as being kept in the world unconscious and insc-

As for the charge of slavery. our male spokesmen are resorting to a sneaky form of sexual backlash. Tradition has made the mother the slave, the child the enslaver. Messrs. Buckley and Noonan are perpetuating this tyrenny by insisting that every fetus has the "right" to be born but that no female has the right not to give birth.

The "usual question" that Mr. Buckley quotes is, of course, a gross exaggeration, but I sometimes wish he and others of his ilk would be "raped and made pregnant by an insane Indian." Or by anyone else, for that matter. Where would their priorities lie then? With the rooster or the egg?

JOAN ZIMMERMAN SHORE. Calpe, Spain.

Vietnam Reprisals

The smooth "explanation" of the Communist murders in Binh Dinh province by Joseph Kraft (THT, Aug. 10) puts all the blame on pacification and American It's an ugly example of how a prejudiced opponent of the war always manages to understand (if not excuse) any Communist action by charging that the other side had provoked it. To call these assassinations "reprisals" is simply a deliberate lie. Or doesn't Mr. Kraft know that thousands of South Vietnamese officials were already systematically killed long before pacification and large scale bombing began, that not only officials but also wealthy peasants were the victims—the latter showing clearly the political concept of unrooting noncommunist structures?

Instead of clearly condemning these atrocities, which never can be regarded by any moral person as acceptable "reprisals," Mr. Kraft does not raise his voice to demand an immediate end to those war crimes. No, he obviously wants to reward the criminals by asking their foes to change their politics in order to "avert" further reprisals!

RODERICH JAKOBI. Vienna.

Choice in Vietnam

I am sure we all agree in principle that President Nixon is right in saying, "It would be the height of immorality for the United States at this point to leave Victnam, and in leaving, to turn over to the North Vietnamese the fate of 17 million South Vietnamese, who do not want a Communist government . . . "

However, who can say that we shall ever reach the point that we could leave with that assurance? If we concede, as it appears we must, that we shall never reach that point-at least without undue further loss in lives for ourselves and the South Vietnamese—then I would believe "that it is the height of immorality." as Sen. McGovern maintains, "for the United States to continue the killing for the specific purpose of preventing a Communist takeover.

HARRISON LEWIS. Madliena, Malta.

Viet Cong Atrocities

Joseph Kraft's New Left doublespeak has been further refined after his recent visit to Henoi. He now explains North Viethamese atrocities in Binh Dinh province by saying that the Communists "move in the fashion of the resistance forces that fought the Nazis in occupied Europe!"

"The more pacification spreads and the more bombing is conducted," Kraft writes, "the more the Communists are prone to use terror tactics against South Vietnamese officials." Has Kraft forgotten that back in the midsixties the Communists were already assassinating in cold blood an average of 20,000 South Vietnamese civilians a year. Entire vilages were wiped out, down to the last woman and child.

Lie Detector Using 'Truth Waves' At Distance Is Built by Israelis

REHOVOT, Israel, Aug. 16 (UPI).—Israeli scientists said today they have developed a new type of a lie detector that uses "fruit; waves" instead of electrodes or straps to establish the innocence or guilt of a suspect. A spokesman for the Weizmann Institute of Science said the invention is to go on display during an international congress of polygraph operators taking place in the United States later this month.

The spokesman said the new device beams "truth waves" -microwaves in the millimeter wavenlength range-at the suspect. It then ricks up and analyzes the signals that bounce from the body to prepare a record of the suspect's response

Thus the new device can be operated without the knowledge of the suspect, he said, giving no further details. The spokesman said that the new device is superior not only to conventional polygraphs that obtain the data by means of electrodes and straps connected to the suspect's body, but also to a most recent version of a lie detector, that analyzes the voice of the suspect without physical contact with him.

Highest World Chess Official Rejects a Protest by Fischer

REYKJAVIK, Aug. 16 (UPI).-The president of the Interna-tional Chess Federation (FIDE) tonight rejected a cabled protest from Bobby Fischer aide Fred Cramer over noisy playing conditions in Fischer's world championship chess match against Russian titlist Boris Spassky.

German arbiter Lothar Schmid. whom Cramer charged with "arrogance and unwillingness." said he received a telephone call from FIDE president and former world chess champion Max Euwe, who is in Amsterdam, instructing him to reject the complaint.

"Dr. Euwe read me the contents of a cable he had received today from Mr. Cramer complaining about the noise in the hall. told him conditions in every respect conformed to the rules, and there was no real disturbance. Dr. Euwe asked me to reject the complaint," Schmid

"A written reply will be published after a meeting with the Icelandic organizers at 10:30 a.m. [temorrow]," Schmid added.

Fischer's Demands Cramer said he cabled Euwe to protest against "the arrogance and unwillingness by Schmid during the last two weeks to improve conditions and eliminate excessive noise in the hall. I want the front rows removed. analyzers banned from demonstrating the game underneath the stage and installed in a press room. Otherwise I shall ask for the match to be played in a private room.

Earlier, Cramer had announced that Fischer, bugged by the noise and now facing tax problems, would not autograph 10 artisan chessboards if they are put up for sale in New York. the U.S. challenger told Cramer "check on what's being done about the noise in the hall, it's worse than ever." But he added. "It was not the reason for my

Fischer escaped with a draw in yesterday's 14th game of the $250,000 world chess championship against Russian titlist Boris Spassky, despite a 20th-move blunder that grand masters called "enormous." The world champion, however, fell into a trap on his 27th move that cost the advantage he had won-of a pown-and finally led to a draw 15th Game

The 15th game is scheduled for 1700 GMT tomorrow, with Spassky playing white and moving first. Fischer has an 8.5 to 5.5point lead. He needs another four points to win the title as the first American champion.

Cramer said the Icelandic organizers "can forget about Bobby's signature" if the 10 chessboards of different sorts of wood in the playing hall are auctioned in New York.

"It was Fischer's understanding the boards would be presented to members of the Icelandic Chess Federation as a token appreciation and not be put to commercial use," Cramer said. Chess sources said each board was expected to fetch $1,000 to

$2,000 if signed by both players and offered for sale. The Icelandic Ministry of Finance meanwhile set up a committee to decide whether to tax the players on the $125,000 otficial prize money. This amount was doubled by a British banker to lure the reluctant Fischer to Iceland.

The winner receives $78,125, the loser $46,875.

MOSCOW, Aug. 16 (UPI).-Soviet Tatars have begun a new campaign to regain their traditional homeland in the Crimes by sending a 20,000-signature penition to party chief Leonid L Brezhnev, a Crimean Tatar spokesman said today.

New Robbins, Vintage Balanchine

By David Stevens

MUNICH, Aug. 16 (IHT).—The New York City Ballet has gone home from its tightly packed four-day appearance here leaving some glorious memories-of new Robbins and old vintage Balanchine—and some very mixed feelings, not only among the mainly German critics on hand, but among many European admirers of Balanchine and his

The guest appearance, part of the Olympic Games cultural program, was an event in capital letters. Critics and dance enthusiasts came from all over Europe, and the National Theater was packed for five performances one of the four programs was repeated-with top ticket prices at about $16 (50 marks). The company has not been seen in Germany in more than a decade, although it has visited Europe a couple of times since.

It seems strange to put anyone's name ahead of George in motion by the music, then left Balanchine's in talking about his company, but without much question the biggest impression made here was by Jerome Robbins's "Goldberg Variations" and "Dances at a Gathering," his two major works since he rejoined the New York troupe in 1969.

For Bach's monumental keyboard work, whose aris and 30 variations are an encyclopedic survey of the music of his time, Robbins has composed a set of abstract variations that are just as much a summing up of his own art. He has done so just as freely as Bach, so that his basically classical vocabulary easily absorbs modern, even Broadway touches.

Beneath Surface Robbins goes far beneath the surface of the music, choreographing the underlying phrase rather than merely the notes, and always with wit, poetry and Among the more memorable variations there was Peter Martins, as disjointed as a puppet on invisible strings, being set limp again at the end, and Allegra Kent and Anthony Blum in a slow and sinuous duet that was a counterpoint to a presto variation. Joe Eula's costumes-beginning with courtly baroque dress, then going to practice clothes and building back toward the baroque before ending in practice clothes helped to give an architectural unity to what is an 80-minute-plus abstract ballet.

Not the least virtue of the work is the attention and renewed interest it gives to the music -and all of it was used-of what can often be one of the great concert-hall soporifics.

Some did, indeed, think that "Goldberg" was too long, but few seemed to have that complaint about the hour-long "Dances at a Gathering." It has in common with "Goldberg" only that the accompaniment is solo piano in this case 16 Chopin études, mazurkas, scherzos and waltzesand that it is a storyless ballet. It too is a compendium of Robbins's humor, lyricism and infinite variety—for five girls and five boys-but its mood is a kind of stalgic-melancholy encounter with nature, subtly suggested by Thomas Skelton's lighting.

The audience loved it, and K. H. Ruppel in Süddeutsche Zeitung called it a "choreographic masterpiece," while noting that its "understanding with the world" would call down on the choreographer's head the charge of being a reactionary—which it did elsewhere in the German

The Pianist

The planist for both of these works was Goldon Boelzner, long the company's rehearsal planist, who not only played well, but gave the dancers a solid but flexible musical floor to work on.

The third Robbins work seen here was "Scherzo Fantastique," to Stravinsky's Opus 3, which was regrettably the only new ballet from the company's historic Stravinsky festival of last June to be brought along. It was a whirling, fleet divertissement with the seemingly weightless Gelsey Kirkland at the center of things. surrounded by four men. This 19-year-old principal dancer was one of the hits here—one dancer in the audience described her as a dancer who could be photographed at any second and still look perfect. Of the seven Balanchine ballets, it was the oldies that were almost unanimously deemed to be the goodies. "Symphony in C" (1948) was received as still the purest expression of Balanchine's genius, and so it was in the strong casting that included Melissa Hayden and Jean-Pierre Bonnefous, Allegra Kent and Peter Martins. Patricia McBride and Edward Villella and Susan Hendl and Frank Ohman, "Episodes" (1959) was given a taut performance, and remains a powerful choreographic expression of Webern's laconic and astringent music.

The pairing of "Monumentum pro Gesualdo" and "Movements for Plano and Orchestra" (1960 and 1963 respectively) maintained the same level with powerful directness and economy, the former with Miss Kirkland and Conrad Ludlow and the latter with the ethereal Kay Mazzo and the veteran Jacques d'Ambolse. Besides dancers already mentioned, the stylish Helgi Tomasson. and the fleet and brilliant John Clifford were outstanding and the use of some members of the corps de ballet in solo parts was noted as a sign of strength:

Master's Evening But the master's full-evening

"Jewels," much praised in New York at its creation in 1967, was received coolly—except for its middle section, "Rubies," using Stravinsky's "Capriccio for piano and orchestra. It was seen as a longer recapitulation of Symphony in C," or more severely as "an orgy of kitsch." And the Tchaikovsky "Suite No. 3," which ended the final program, almost umanimously repelled the critics with the extravegent rumanticism of the first three movements, and was the only work actually booed by the audience-a lamentable way for things to end.

Although some of the German critics were almost comically extravagant in their more negative comments, there do seem to have been identifiable reasons for the mixed feelings that this guest appearance provoked. There was an unaccustomed lack of precision and unity in ensemble, which might well have been due to such things as jet lag and brutally hot weather. The repertory could have been stronger—and here, Günther Rennert, head of the Bavarian State Opera, who had a large hand in choosing it, received some criticism in the press. At least one of Balanchine's new Stravinsky works "Violin Concerto," "Symphony in Three Move-ments" or "Danses Concerrected the notion that the master is over the hill.

Pinally, there is the feeling that a lot has happened in ballet in Europe in the last decade, and ballet followers here-not without a touch of chauvinism... are taking a more critical look.

But, as Heinz-Ludwig Schneiders wrote in the Stuttgarter Nachrichten (about "Rubles"), it is clear where today's best choreographers get what they have— They have it from him, from

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

BAT, IMP Terminate Pact

Brillsh American Tobacco (BAT) and Imperial Tobacco (IMP) are terminating a territorial trading arrangement under which IMP limited is tobacco operations to Britain while BAT restricted them to overseas markets. IMP does not intend to sell its 23.5 percent holding of BAT's ordinary shares in the immediate future. The major reason for the termination of the agreement is the planned entry of Britain into the EEC. The pact would not stand up under EEC regulations, company officials said. The com-panies examined and rejected a merger or some form of union of their European interests. Terinfustion of the agreement has far-reaching implications, as BAT markets IMP brands outside Britain. The companies said problems concerning ownership and use of trade marks are still being examined. Both companies will continue to liaise closely on matters of mutual concern such as the joint interest in Mardon Packaging International Ltd., tobacco leaf supplies, production machinery development and scientific and technical research including that relating to smoking and health.

Colgute-Kendall Merger Approved Stockholders of Colgate Palmolive Co. and Kendall Co. have voted at special meetings held separately to approve the $323-million merger of Kendall into a subsidiary of Colgate. The mer-ger becomes effective immediately.

The hotel will be opened by the spring of 1974.

Harris-Intertype Sees Lower Profit

Harris-Intertype's sales and earnings for the fiscal fourth quarter ended June 30 are expected to show improvement from the depressed levels of the year-earlier quarter, says Richard R. Tullis, president and chief executive. But the improvement will not be enough to offset a decline in earnings reported for the nine months, and net income from operations for the June 30 fiscal year is expected to be below results for fiscal 1971. Operating earnings for the year should be $128 million to $12.9 million, or slightly more than $2 a share. The principal reason for the decline in earnings for the year was a falloff in demand for large, sheet-fed offset presses. At the same time, imported small and medium sheet-fed presses posed unusually strong competition.

IONDON, Aug. 16 (AP-DJ).— British retail prices will probably rise during the rest of the year at a faster rate than the 6.1 percent recorded in June, Mid-land Bank says in its latest economic review published today. The same trend would also apply to wholesale prices and wage rates, the bank said. It maintained that inflationary expectations are strong, though the economy is still operating at under capacity. It sees "little or no prospect" of an upturn in industrial investment in the second half of the year.

Stirs Controversy in U.S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16 (AP-DJ) -Everything was going right for a Forest Service program in which the right to use its name in corporate advertising was exchanged for more than two million seedling trees. Then Nissan Motor Co. joined the project,

The Japanese maker of Datsun autos entered with a nationally publicized promise to "plant a tree in a national forest for every est drive" by prospective customers. And suddenly the Forest Service found itself at cross-purposes with the Treasury Department.

At the heart of the controversy is a burgeoning U.S. trade deficit with Japan, Nissan could enlarge the gap by at least $10 million by early autumn if its $2 million television and radio campaign pays off with an expected 50,000 additional sales.

under "serious scrutiny" in Washington. The Treasury, which usually takes a strong and active role in things like trade and balance of payments, agonized for nearly a week over a request for official psign. First it promised an oral interview, then written comment from an under secretary. Finally it declined to comment or to make public any behind-thescenes meddling. Official reason: The department was atraid of saying anything that might upset President Nixon's delicate, highlevel trade talks with Japanese officials later this month. The Commerce Department was equally close-mouthed.

If not yet a subject for public debate on the international monetary scene, the unlikely merger of autos and trees has apparently struck a responsive chord among ecology-minded citizens. "It's really hit a nerve," says Phil Willon. an ebullient creative director of the firm that handles Nissan's ad campaigns, "It makes the company look good, it's doing something nice for the country, and I can't ever remember anything where the response was so large and so instant."

According to Mr. Willon, the Nissan strategy is "really a simple thing. We're always looking for a way to get someone to test drive the car, because then wa think we can sell it." He says Nissan is hoping for as many as 300,000 responses and one-fifth that many added sales.

Swiss Loan May Topple Penn Central

Parent of Line Is Told To File for Bankrup!cy

By Robert E. Bedingfield NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (NYT).— Richard Joyce Smith, trustee of the New Haven Railroad, 2 corporate shell, recommended yesterday to Archibald DeB. Johnson, chairman of the Penn Central Co., that he petition the federal district court in Philadelphia for reorganization of the holding company (Penn Central) under Chapter XI of the Federal Bankruptcy Act and ask for the appointment of a disinterested

The Penn Central Co, is the sole owner of the stock of the bankrupt Penn Central Railroad. Mr. Smith holds more than 950,000 shares—about 4 percent—of the holding company's stock, which he received when the Penn Central acquired the operating railroad properties of the New Haven in 1968.

Mr. Smith acted yesterday on the order of federal Judge Robert P. Anderson of New Haven, who is in charge of the New Haven's reorganization. It has been bankrupt since July, 1961.

Judge Anderson also ordered the New Haven trustee to vote against a refinancing plan of a Penn Central subsidiary organized in Curacao, Stockholders of the Penn Central, at a meeting called for Aug. 24 in Philadel-phia, are being asked to approve a refinancing of a $59 million Swiss franc loan of the Curacao subsidiary. The loan matured more than a year ago. Proceeds of the loan were used for the railroad in the last months before it filed for bankruptcy.

In a proxy statement for next week's meeting, Mr. Johnson warned Penn Central's 140,000 registered stockholders that if the refinancing plan were not ap-proved, the holding company would not be able to meet its obligations to the noteholders and other creditors. "This would, therefore, likely lead to proceedings under bankruptcy law or similar laws," Mr. Johnson stated.

French Trade Surplus Firm

PARIS. Aug. 16 (AP-DJ).-France had a trade surplus of 1.188 billion francs (about $232 million) in July, compared with surpluses of 1.199 billion francs in June and 952 million francs in July 1971, the Pinance Ministry announced today.

On a sessonally-adjusted basis, July's surplus was 496 million francs, compared with surpluses of 910 million francs in June and 283 million francs in July, 1971. Overall gross imports amounted to 9.497 billion francs, down from 10.95 billion in June, but up from 9.233 billion a year earlier. Exports totaled 10.685 billion francs, down from 12.149 billion in June. but up from 10.185 billion in

Xerox Challenges Analysts' Assessment of Its Earnings

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (AP-DJ).--"If we ran this business Wall Street's way, we'd run it into the ground," says C. Peter McColough, Xerox's chief executive.

"We're in this business for a hell of a long time and we're not going to try to maximize earnings over the short run," he declares in response to Wall Street profit forecasts. Several brokerage houses have raised their 1972 earnings sights to $3.25 a share, compared with 1971's $2.71. Mr. Mc-Colough thinks the $3.10 to $3.15 range is more reasonable. He believes the upgraded projections reflect some analysts' pectations of accelerated second-half earnings, after a first-half gain of 18 percent. But Mr. McColough does not see it that way. "I think a lot of the benefits of the U.S. recovery have already taken

He characterizes the current quarter as "very good" so far and projects sales and earnings gains of at least 15 per-cent from year-earlier levels. He sees the current year's sales at "something over $2.4 billion," up from 1971's $1.96 billion. He expects 1973 se es and profits to be up 15 to 20 percent, probably, he adds, "closer to 20 than 15 percent."

With the hefty advance in price-earnings multiples, critics have been stepping up their criticism of the major growth stocks, including Xerox, which sells at over 50 times earnings. Says Mr. McColough: "We've been facing this question as long as I've been here . . . for the past 18 years." He adds: "Sure, there is more risk. But the real assessment the likelihood of steady growth." As he sees it, Xerox's sales and earnings should average 15 to 30 percent annual growth over the next seven years.

Not a Pinsancak What about the threat of a head-on collision with IBM in the office-copier sector?

"It'll be a good fight, but I think we'll survive and do well," Mr. McColough says. "I've got a lot of respect for IBM, but they're not going up against a pipsqueak. They're up against a bigger sales force in the office-products business. And man for man, we think we're as good as anyone in the business, including IBM."

Xerox's unprofitable computer business lost about $38 million pretax, last year—$24 million from operations and $14 million from write-offs. And some analysts wonder whether Xerox will ever make the grade in the computer sector.

Mr. McColough sees a similar operating loss this year and probably about the same in 1973, although he expects orders and revenue to improve somewhat next year. Asserting that developing the computer business is a long-range objective, he says Xerox will continue to spend substantial sums to build up its operations. And he thinks the computer but ness could move into the black by "roughly 1976."

Rank Xerox earnings should rise about 25 to 30 percent in the Oc. 31 fiscal year, he says, but at a lesser rate in fiscal 1973 because of currency changes.

Giorgio Belladonna of Italy demonstrated both accurate bidding and brilliant play against his traditional French rivals in the diagramed deal from the recent World Bridge Team Olympiad in Miami Beach.

Belladonna, sitting Soutla, opened one diamond. His partner, Walter Avarelli immediately headed for slam, with a jump shift followed by Blackwood, and finally restrained himself from bidding a grand slam when he found there was a king missing.

West led a spade, South ducked in dummy and East won with the king. He returned a spade to dummy's queen, and South foresaw no difficulties. But when he played diamonds, the second round revealed the bad division. Now it was necessary to rely on the club suit for the 12th trick, and as can be seen the finesse was due to fail.

The declarer found a line that gave him various extra chances. He took two more diamond winners, discarding a heart and a club from the dummy, followed by another spade winner, leaving this position:

The telephone rings with an urgent message from a downtown infirmary that "what was once dormant is now a Creeping Thing" and that if it "becomes pandemic it will mean the end of Civilization as we know it. Cripes! What is this creeping thing? Why, it's Jes Grew—an anti-plague, which, in-stead of causing the hody to waste away, enlivens the host, infecting it with an uncontrollable urge to "wiggle and wobble to clap hands and sing." It "is electric as life and is characterized by ebuildence and ecstasy." So called because, like Topsy and the earliest ragtime songs, it "jes' grew." Jes Grew is now, in the 1920s, threatening the uptight heart of Protestant America. End. of trailer. Any attempt on my part to accurately explain just how it unfolds would deal a death-blow to the mind's ability to absorb plot summary. But that trailer (as in a film) ought to give you a rough idea. As Reed quotes Carey Mc-Williams talking in Stude Terkel's "Hard Times" (1970): "After the stock market creah, some New York editors suggested that hearings be held; what had really caused the depression? They were held in Washington. In retrospect, they make the finest comic reading. They hadn't the toggiest notion what had gone

But Reed knows "what had gone bad," and he has dramatized it all in his satirical-philosophical-vaudeville-minstrel-show of a detective story. It was the threat of the pandemic Jes Grew eating its way into the hearts and minds of the American people. To be sure, Warren Ga-maliel Harding was elected President "on the platform let's be done with wiggle and wobble."
(Reed cites Robert K. Murray's "The Harding Era" as the sourcethe time of speakeasies and flapper and dance-crazes. Cakewalks and Ragtime. Jes Grew was obviously rampant, threatening even Downtown New York and Wall Street. And President Harding himself was rumored to have "a touch of the tarbrush," as the English used to put it. (When asked by Republicans to deny it. Harding replied, according to Reed's citation of J.A. Rogers's. "The Five Negro Presidents U.S.A.": "How should I know.

For Ethiopians, It's a Long Jog Home

MUNICH, Aug. 16 (IHT) -After maning a long distance into the track and field world, the proud lions of Ethiopia may meekly have to jog back to their lonely domains. They will not set any speed records leaving the Olympia grounds. "We are athletes. We are always ready to compete," said. Neguesie Roba, the Ethiopian track and field coach after it was confirmed earlier today that the Ethiopian government and ordered the team not to compete if "the rebel govern-ment of Rhodesia" is allowed in

"I don't give a damn if we leave," said Gebre Tesfazzi, a 100-meter man. "If the team goes home, if they feel good about going home, then I go home." The meek and thin Mamo Wolde said, "I am only an athlete. I know nothing about politics," and then he went bouncing away, his spindly legs gliding over the grass.

Symbolic of Progress What Wolde knows about is mining, running and running, and he is symbolic of the procress of Ethiopian trackmen. In Melbourne in 1956, the Ethiopian flag, with its glaring lion, flew for the first time at the Olympic Games. Ethiopia had 12

competitors, no medals, and Wolde, then 23, did nothing in the 800 and 1,500 meters. Wolde failed to make the Games in 1960, but didn't give up, and ran to a fourth place finish in Tokyo in 1984. In Mexico City in 1968, Wolde finished second in the 10,000 maters and went on to score Ethiopia's third straight marathon conquest. Abebe Bikila won the gold medal in 1960, Africa's first in history, and in 1964 became the first man to repeat in the more than 26-mile excursion.

"Of course, we have people who are ready to win here." said Desta Girma, chef de mis-sion of the Ethiopian team. He said that his team "understands the possibility" that they may not have a chance to win anything, and that they might be "sacrificing" medals, but that he and the team must abide by the government's decision. Girma said that if Ethiopia competes, it would reinforce the position of the rebel government of Southern Rhodesia." "If the organizing committee," said Girma, "together with the IOO (International Olympic Committee) and the federal (German) government will not find a suitable solution, we will be obliged to return home." Ethiopia will wait until next week for Rhodesia to be booted Chicago's Luis Alvarado hit a three-run inside-the-park homer today in the second inning as center fielder Brock Davis tried for an almost impossible eatch on a sinking line drive which got by him and rolled to the fence. In the sixth, the White Sox scored two runs without getting a hit. Ed Herrmann walked, Alvarado was safe on an error, and Walt Williams and Mike Andrews walked, forcing in a run. The second run scored when catcher Ellie Rodriguez tagged home instead of the runner in a no-force situation. Forster got his 19th save in relief of Wood.

Last night, heads-up base running by Dick Allen was the difference. After Andrews's solo homer in the fourth, Allen walked. Apparently picked off by losing pitcher Bill Parsons, he made it safely to second and went to third when first baseman George Scott's throw went into center field. Allen scored on Rick Reichardt's single through a drawn-in infield.

The White Sox picked up 37year-old righthander Moe Drabowsky yesterday. Drabowsky, re-cently released by the Cardinals. has a 1-1 won-lost record this year, a 2.42 earned-run average and two saves in 26 innings.

Reds Shut Out Phillies, 3-0, As Gullett Comes On Strong

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (NYT).— Don Gullett, the Cincinnati Reds young pitching sensation last season and a near flop this season came up with a performance last night that could be considered a morale booster for him. The 22-year-old lefthander, who had not completed a game all season, took over in the second inning—when Wayne Simpson, the starting pitcher, reinjured a calf muscle—and beat the Phillies, 3-0, in Philadelphia, Gullett, who finished with 16-6 won-lost record last year in his second season, scattered four hits and struck out eight Phillies. It was his fourth victory against seven defeats.

Tigers' Martin Attempting to Pull Pennant Out of Hat

tere against three corge Young Ken nadian Grant Mc Tigers' manager Billy Martin, who did is the U.S. recordsome coaching last weekend, gives sign two mile with from the third-base coaching box.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16 (NYT) -Ever since Billy Martin was a street kid in Oakland, getting into fights under his square name of Alfred Manuel Pesano, he has been characterized by what Joseph Conrad called an open, generous, frank, barbarous reck-

He was a rookie riding the Yankees' bench m 1952 when the Marines called up Jerry Coleman, the best second baseman in the American League, for service in Korea. This gave Martin a chance to play regularly but he did not exclaim, "Oh, goodie!" Finding his name eighth in the batting order, he sought out Casey Stengel. "What is this. a joke?" he demanded. "I suppose tomorrow I'll be hitting behind the groundkeeper."

"Where do you think you should be hitting?" the manager asked. "Third?" "Where else?" the young man said.

Still a museum piece among heedless World Series plays is one Martin employed to insure the Yankees' defeat in the fourth game of their 1953 struggle with the Brooklyn Dodgers. With the Dodgers leading, 7-3, Gene Woodling and Martin singled in the ninth inning and Gil McDougald walked, filling the bases. There was prumise of a big Yankee rally, but Clem Labine relieved Billy Loes, struck out Phil Rizznto and got the second out on a fly by Johnny Mize. Mickey Mantle singled to left, scoring Woodling with the Yankees' fourth run, and Martin gambled that he could get home from second base with a meaningless fifth. Running with great resolution, not to mention open, generous, frank and barbarous recklessness, he ran the Yankees plumb out of the ball came.

Those were Martin's salad days, when he was green in judgment. In fairness, it should be added that he was the star of the series, which the Yankees won in six games. He batted 500 and his 12 hits equaled the World Series record that Pepper Martin had set 22 years earlier in seven

On May 16, 1957, when Martin attained to the wisdom of 29 years, he celebrated the birthday in the Copacabana, a popular waterhole in New York, in company with Hank Bauer, Yogi Berra, Whitey Ford and their wives. Toasis were drunk, words spoken, a stranger awoke the next day with a lump on his jaw, and Martin wound up in Kansas

"I never dared to be a radical when young. Robert Frest has told us, "for fear it would make me conservative when old." It didn't work that way as Billy Martin matured. As a coach with the Minnesota Twins, he punched Howard Fox, the traveling secretary.

Star Pitcher Is Slugged When he succeeded to the dignity of manager, he slugged his star pitcher, Dave Boswell, stiff as a straw hat, in a brawl outside a saloon. He complained publicly about the work of the club's personnel director, a relative of the boss, and when the Twins finished first in the American League West under Martin's direction, Calvin Griffith, the owner, handed Martin his head as a token of his esteem.

This is Martin's second season as licensed wonder worker for the Detroit Tigers. Since training camp opened he has been promising that his team would win in the American League East. Arriving in New York last week with his club in first place, he said that if it hadn't been for the players' strike last spring the Tigers would be out of sight. The Tigers lost three of their four games in Yankee Stadium. They went home, lost twice to Cleveland, and dropped out of first So Martin tried a novel experiment. Before Sunday's doubleheader with the Indians, he put the names of his eight regulars in a hat, shook well, and had Al Kaline select the batting order in a blind draw. Norm Cash, the club's leading power hitter, led off, and Ed Brinkman, hitting 205, batted clean-up. Detroit won, 8-2. For the second game, Martin revised the batting order according to his best judgment. For the sixth time in eight games, Detroit lost.

John E. Fetzer, owner of the Tigers, has not yet fired Martin and hired Martin's hat, but if he should, Martin will know where he

"I think I've got a fantastic idea," he said. "I want to start a new business called Hurts' Rent-a-Gun'. "

"What on earth for?" I asked. There are a lot of people in this country who only use a handgun once or twice a year, and they don't want to go to all the expense of buying one, So well rent them a gun for a day or two. By leasing a firearm from us, they won't have to tie up all their money."

That makes sense," I admitted. "Say a guy is away from home on a trip, and he doesn't want to carry his own gun with him. He can rent a gun from us and then return it when he's finished with his business."

"You could set up rent-a-gun counters at gas stations," I said excitedly.

"And we could have stores in town where someone could rent a gun to settle a bet," Rurts

"A lot of people would want to rent a gun for a domestic quar-rel." I said. "Right. Say a jealous husband

"There's no end to the businers." I said, "How would you charge for Hurts Rent-a-Gun?" "There would be hourly rates, day rates and weekly rates, plus 10 cents for each bullet fired. If a gun malfunctions through no fault of the user, we will give him another gun absolutely free."

'For many Americans it's a dream come true." I said. "We've also made it possible for people to return the gun in another town. For example, if you rent the gun in Chicago and want to use it in Salt Lake City, you can drop it off there at no extra charge. "Why didn't you start this before?

"We wanted to see what happened with the gun-control legislation. We were pretty sure the Senate and the White House would not do anything about strong gun control, especially during an election year. But we didn't want to invest a lot of money until we were certain they would all chicken out."

Calif. Lends $50,000

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Aug. 16 (AP).—The government has come to the aid of the jumping frogs of Calaveras County. Gov. Ronald Reagan, whose own entries in the annual contest have not fared too well, announced Monday that he has signed into law a $50,000 loan to the Calaveras County Fair to absorb this year's losses.

The 1972 event drew fewer people than were expected. Organizers said that they had engaged security forces because of "unruly nersons" who attended the 1971 contest. It turned out that the forces were not needed because the crowds were so light. "frightened away by last year's uniavorable publicity." the orcanizers said.

Relevant Engineering and Cars

By Jerry M. Flint

DETROIT, Aug. 16 (NYT).—One thing about building a small, safe, nonpoliuting automobile is that "it's not as easy as it looks," said Ed Eberl, a student from the University of "The first thing about safety," a student from the University of Oklahoma suggested. "is to get a car running. It isn't dangerous if it isn't running."

Last week 61 cars built by these college students and others from the United States and Canada were tested in a contest at the sprawling General Motors Corp. proving grounds

The contest, called the Urban Vehicle Design Competition, was sponsored by Student Competitions on Relevant Engineering, a student group with a board of directors made up of deans of 10 engineering schools.

The competition was designed to involve engineering students in environmental and other social problems and was an offshoot of the cross-country clean air race of 1970.

Mostly Small Cars

Most of the student-built cars are small. Some are modified versions of American automobiles, but many were constructed from hundreds of odd parts. There were little cars with ordinary gasoline engines-some with engines as small as eight horsepower—but with special devices to reduce emissions. There were battery-driven cars and cars that ran on propane, hydrogen or even ammonia. There were sleek models that looked as if they came from one of Detroit's design studics, and there were some that looked as if they came from a child's workshop.

Most of the students' cars ran-up to a point, although the major work at the big proving grounds seemed to be tinkering, twisting, screwing and tightening parts to keep the little cars moving through their test cycles.

There were no real durability requirements in the competi-An award-winning electric car from the University of Toronto could manage about five miles an hour in speed. Another award-winner, a hydrogen-powered model from the University of California at Los Angeles, had a range of about 25 miles at the proving grounds.

"We've got the nation's only running ammonia car." said J.W. Hodgson, an engineering adviser from the University of Tennessee, while a student, wearing a gas mask for safety, refueled a tiny white car that emits no carbon monoxide or hydrocarbon fumes. "One of these days we'll run out of hydrocarbon fuels [such as gasoline]. Ammonia can be synthesized from water and air." he said.

"You learn there are a lot of compromises involved." said Keith Peterson from Western Washington State College in Bellingham, Wash., as he walted to have his car tested for emissions. Like other student engineers, he found that he had to weigh safety and emission factors against size, cost and driveability.

The grand prize winner was a sleek 123-inch-long two-seater built by students from the University of British Columbia at Vancouver. The car, costing $35,000 to build, carried an inventive system to foil thieves and drunken drivers. A driver must punch a four-digit combination on a nine-button console in the door to open it, and then punch out two more numbers on a console on the dashboard to start the car-a system, some thought, that might foil sober drivers as well as drunks."

Automobile manufacturers said that they had not learned anuything about car design or about reducing pollution from the students' efforts and that many of their ideas would not stand up in thorough testing. "But I've seen some extremely credible work" said Roy Haeusler, the Chrysler Corp.'s chief safety engineer, who checked the students' cars for safety features.

In the effort to build lower-pollution vehicles, the students cars at GM's proving grounds were tested under the tough 1975 federal emission standards for cold and hot starting. But few of the student vehicles could run 25,000 to 50,000 miles, and the government expects Detroit's emission control equipment to last that long without much service.

The aim of the competition was to stress "the multilevel implications of engineering work," said George Flint, a Tufts University student who is president of the sponsoring student Working engineers are expected to worry about "cost and quality," he said, but the search for relevance means they become concerned about using their work to solve social problems, such as urban transportation, and to regard safety and antipollution goals along with cost and quality.

Working in the Rain

There was no doubt about the students' enthusiasm. They worked until dark in the rain here, making last-minute repairs. and shouted with joy when their cars struck a barrier at five miles an hour to test bumpers.

"I don't think the problem is getting engineers interested in social problems. I think it's trying to get more social scientists to use technology" to solve the problems, said John Summu. the associate engineering dean at Tufts University and one of the directors of the sponsoring organization.

The winners, those whose cars performed best in tests on emissions, safety and costs, were awarded plaques at a dinner attended by John A. Volpe, secretary of transportation. If the automotive executives who watched the tests at the proving grounds, which GM provided for the competition, did not learn much from the automobiles, they said they bad learned something about the students. "Look at them," said one General Motors official, "they're really serious about this. They're really working at it." Their attitude and ingenuity and readiness to tackle problems are In Tidewater, Va., Navy wives of an inch below hunter who tracked down Adolf Elchmann, believes he has established that Christopher Columbus was a converted Jer. who went to America to seek the ten lost tribes of Israel.

Columbus's trip, Wiesenthal maintains, was financed by rich Spanish Jews and he took a Hebrew Interpreter with him in order to talk to the Jews he hoped to encounter.

Wiesenthal's theory is contained in a book that will be published this fall in six European countries and the United States.

"I am convinced Columbus was a converted Jew," Wiesenthal told the AP in a telephone interview. "There are so many details to back this up. He knew the Jewish calendar, the Jewish prophets and his diary showed deep knowledge of Jewish histo-

Wiesenthal said he began to become interested in Columbus as he sought links between the Nazi persecution of the Jews and the Spanish Inquisition, Studying the Inquisition period. he said, he discovered that Columbus's voyage was essentially fi-nanced by Jewish money

"Columbus set sail only five hours before announcement of the decrees that brought on the Inquisition I began to ask myself why the Jews financed Columbus when others refused. Who was he and what did the Jews want out of him?". Wiesenthal said.

"I think I can demonstrate that the Jews, concerned about the situation in Spain, were seeking an area to flee, perhaps one where they would find a protector. They believed that the ten lost tribes had found refuge in India and it might serve as a refuge for them as well."

This, he said, was his explanation for the Hebrew interpreter. Columbus, he said, was a Ro-man Catholic "but I am convinced he was following the law of
